In the heavily regulated world of Life Sciences, EXTEDO helps organizations maintain Effortless Compliance™ with industry standards and regulatory requirements. Since 2003, EXTEDO has become one of the leading names in the field of pharmaceutical compliance and Regulatory Information Management (RIM). Our products are used by over 35 regulatory authorities and over 1000 industry customers worldwide.

Our software may be industry leading, but our people make EXTEDO who we are. Our team of experts work with regulatory agencies, clinical research organizations (CROs) and life sciences companies around the globe. They help bring life-changing drugs and medicinal breakthroughs to market faster. They drive the development of radical new medical devices that revolutionize treatments and increase our well-being. And they help maintain the controls and standards that make modern medicine safer than it has ever been before. With innovation and openness as part of our culture, many of our team also play leading roles within local standards committees and the ISO. They represent EXTEDO at a global level and define industry standards worldwide.

Bringing together the right people is what makes any relationship a success, and at EXTEDO we chose our team with care. Whether your interests lie in software development, business consulting, project management, client support, finance, human resources, marketing, sales or elsewhere, we always seek the best. If you would like to be part of our global team and help bring the next great medical breakthrough to market, contact us at career.extedo.com
